NEW MAGAZINES.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE for February is as rich in illustration and as varied and entertaining in its reading-matter as any number that has ever been issued. For massive strength, Blackmore's new novel, Mary Anerley, deserves first mention. Those who prefer a lighter novel will turn with pleasure to the chapters of Black's White Wings. Edward Everett Hale contributes a short story—Mr. Keeper's House Cat—conceived and written in his happiest vein. A brief story of thrilling interest, entitled A Night in an Avalanche, is contributed by S. H. M. Byers. The illustrated articles cover a wide range of subjects. Howard Pyle writes and illustrates Bartram and his Garden. The Rev. B. F. De Costa contributes a humorous article on Foreign Tips. Mrs. J. W. Davis describes A Famous Breviary. One of the most interesting articles that have ever been written about General Washington is that contributed by William F. Carne, treating of Washington as a Rugher, i. e., in his relations with his fellow-townsmen of Alexandria. The Hon. John Bigelow contributes an illustrated paper entitled A Visit to las Marias. A. B. Allen contributes an illustrated description of the Percheron and Norman Horses. A. A. Hayes, Jr., contributes his series of Colorado papers. The Right Reverend Arthur Cleveland Coxe contributes a poem entitled The Drop Star. A timely musical contribution to this number is the paper on Hector Berlioz, by Emily Royall. Among the poems is one by James T. Fields, in his best vein, entitled A Lover's Peril. A Symposium of Wood-Engravers, is a paper in which some of the most distinguished engravers of this country are given a hearing. The Editor's Easy Chair renders a graceful tribute to Oliver Wendell Holmes, apropos of his recent reception in Boston, and discusses, in a thoughtful essay, the reaction against Dickens due to that author's personal characteristics.

ECLECTIC MAGAZINE. The February number is promptly to hand, and contains for frontispiece an admirable steel engraved portrait of Professor Asa Gray, the eminent botanist. The literary contents of the number are remarkably varied and attractive, the list being as follows: Lord Beaconsfield, in two papers, one written by a Tory and entitled Why We Follow Him, and the other written by a Whig and entitled Why We Disbelieve in Him; First Impressions of the New World, by the Duke of Argyll; The Letters of Charles Dickens, by William Minto; History and Politics, by Professor Seeley; Early English Ballads, A Gossip about Goethe in his Birthplace; Teaching Grandmother—Grandmother's Teaching, by Alfred Austin; three chapters of White Wings: A Yachting Romance, by William Black; The Literary Calling and its Future, by James Payn; Escape from Pain—The History of a Discovery, by Sir James Paget; A Sonnet in Dialogue, by Austin Dobson; two chapters of Mademoiselle de Mersac; Carlyle's Political Doctrines, by William L. Courtney; Sunshine and Shadow, a poem; Professor Asa Gray, a biographical sketch; Literary Notices; Foreign Literary Notes; Science and Art; and Varieties. Published by E. R. Pelton, 25 Bond Street, New York.

The opening article in LIPPINCOTT'S MAGAZINE for February, A Day with the Ottawa Chandler-Men, by Frederic G. Mather, gives a lively account of the lumbermen and much information about the prospects of Canadian forest lands, with many good illustrations. Old and New Rouen is the first of two illustrated papers, by Edward King, describing in his usual flowing and graphic style the most picturesque and interesting of French provincial towns. The eighth chapter of Dr. Oswald's Summerland Sketches, also illustrated, carries the reader to the Delta of the Sumasinta River. A Future Capitol of the United States is a short, well-written paper. In the first of two carefully written papers on Decorative Art and its Dogmas, the writer, M. G. Van Rensselaer, points out the danger of treating the principles as final and universal axioms. The Bonapartes in Exile, by Arthur Venner, is a very entertaining paper.

LITTELL'S LIVING AGE. The number for the week ending January 24, has the following noteworthy contents: The Functions of the Brain, by Dr. Julius Althaus; He that Will not when he May, by Mrs. Oliphant, advance sheets; Buddha's First Sermon; Bush-Life in Queensland; Adam and Eve, by the author of Dorothy Fox, advance sheets; The Ticknor Library, Boston; Mandrin, a Desperado of the Last Century, translated for THE LIVING AGE from Figaro; Small Talk; The Animal Heat of Fishes; Irresolution; A Feat in Triangulation; and the usual amount of choice poetry, etc. The two serial stories above mentioned, one by Mrs. Oliphant, and the other by the author of Dorothy Fox, have been recently begun, and the publishers present to new subscribers for 1880 the six numbers of 1879 which contain the opening chapters of both serials. Littell & Co., Boston, are the publishers.

Hon. Eugene L. Norton, member of the Massachusetts Senate, died yesterday. Sunday last Mr. Norton, his left leg having been attacked by a malignant tumor, submitted to amputation. Mr. Norton was a native of Livermore, Maine, but removed to Massachusetts several years ago. His age was 55 years.

Cumberland.

Just before noon, Wednesday, a widow lady, Mrs. N. C. Butrick, living in Portland, started to go down the cellar stairs, and fell from one side to the floor. There was nobody in the house at the time, except her aunt, an aged lady, and a servant. The neighbors were called and Mrs. Butrick was taken up stairs, unconscious but still alive. The physicians were called, but her injuries proved fatal and she expired at about two o'clock.

Mr. Joseph Chandler, one of the oldest and best known of the locomotive engineers on the Grand Trunk road, died at his house in Gorham, N. H., on Tuesday. His remains were brought to Portland for interment.

George Pratt, of New Vineyard, got very badly hurt, the first of this month, in O. S. Turner's mill. He was running a large circular saw when a board, four feet long and one foot wide, caught on the saw and flew into many pieces, a number of them hitting Mr. Pratt on the head and one in the eye, which piece was so large that it brought up on the bones around the eye, not breaking the eyeball. Another piece cut the scalp from his forehead, leaving quite a piece of the skull bare. Mr. P. is doing well.

Hancock.

Daniel Hurley, of Ellsworth, lost a horse Monday evening. The horse was taken sick while Mr. Hurly was driving it and died before he could get it home.

Isaac E. Bridges, son of James M. Bridges, of Ellsworth, who had been employed by A. F. Weaver, cutting timber in Township 29, broke his leg, Friday week, by a mishap and was brought to Ellsworth Saturday.

Brooks & Dunlevy's "spool wood" camp near Blackwood mountain, Township No. 7, was by accident, burned last week. Loss, including provisions, bedding and a good watch belonging to Capt. N. Brooks, about $100.

Knox.

On Thursday of last week while Mr. Benjamin Chapman, of Appleton, was engaged in drilling out an old charge in a quarry near Smith's Mills, the powder exploded tearing his pants on one side from the bottom of the leg to the waist and throwing his drill high into the air, depositing it ten or twelve rods from him in the snow. The strangest part of it all is that Mr. C. escaped with scarcely a scratch.

Mrs. Rider, of Thomaston, was seized with sudden illness on Sunday afternoon about five o'clock, and died Monday morning about nine, having been unconscious all the time.

Oliver of the Creedmore receiving fourteen shares of stock and will command the Samoset or Sasanoa, whichever boat it is decided to run next season on the Peek. The engineer of the Creedmore will be engineer of the boat and the large steamer which will be immediately built by a Bath firm for service on the Back river route to Boothbay, will be commanded by Capt. G. A. Lowe, formerly the popular commander of the Sasanoa. The Creedmore will probably be run in Boothbay harbor during the excursion season.

A Panama letter of the 12th gives an account of the flooding of the Cauca valley in the early part of December, by which several valleys were submerged. The river became three miles wide. Several lives are reported lost. On the subsidence of the flood the valley was a scene of ruin. Crops, movables and animals were all gone. The cocoa farmers then visited Haciendas in boats trying to gather the crops left on the trees. They had to go armed to protect themselves against immense snakes in the branches driven there by the water. The losses will aggregate at least $1,000,000.

SATURDAY, JAN. 29, 1859.

SPEECH TO THE JUDICIARY OF MAINE.

Among the many tributes to the ability and correctness of the opinion of the Supreme Judicial Court of Maine, reviewed in the recent critical juncture, is that paid by a distinguished lawyer, statesman and soldier of New Hampshire in the following private letter to Hon. Charles J. Gilman, of Brunswick, who has kindly permitted us to copy it. Although the letter—which was written some weeks ago and referred to the answers of the Court to the questions propounded, by Governor Garcelon—was not intended for print, we cannot think that the distinguished author will object to seeing his name published as authority for the honorable conclusion and we therefore take the liberty of appending to it the names of the writer, that able lawyer, gallant soldier and veteran statesman, Hon. Clement Morrison, of Exeter, N. H. The letter is addressed to Hon. Mr. Gilman in as follows:

"The Supreme Court of Maine has performed great work. The fog that appeared to blind a great many persons is entirely brushed away. The language of the questions propounded by Governor Garcelon and his co-democratic supporters quoted is completely blockhead out. If the Governor now persists in his course he has begun, everybody will say he is not only fitted for a crazy lunatic asylum, but for the penitentiary. If he yields now with what grace he can, some may say he is only foolish.

"The opinion is forcible to assault, logical and majestic. It is a great load off my mind and I feel free again. For the bold and dishonest it is a damning and stinging reward, and for honest men and republican rulers it is a great relief.

"The strength, ability and integrity of the Court will never be questioned while the world stands. If the Governor and his Council fail to assist as they invited the Court, the responsibility must with them rest, and upon them only.

Yours truly,
CLEMENT MORRISON.

Exeter, N. H., Jan. 8, 1859.

WHAT DO THEY KNOW?

[From the Boston Journal.]

Some time ago the gentlemanly editor of Democratic clergymen, with an a member of the so-called Young Maine but constituted his share toward the extension of the Fusion designs upon the Government, doubted that they could derive more benefit from the spiritual administration of a man who was free from such a taint. The stockholders of a sectional bank in Skowhegan took occasion to drop them the list of directors, as their last annual meeting, a good lesson to the loyal hosts particularly ardent and resolved in his opposition of the Glendon plan of making a fuss. One of the "respectable" members of the Fusion House, who is exceedingly desperately to obtain a seat to publish his knows he was not elected, complained on Wednesday that he was the victim of special connexion at home. And over a dispatch street that, at the meeting of the stockholders of the Merchants' Marine Insurance Company at Bangor on Wednesday, Hon. John B. Brown, who was a member of Gov. Garcelon's Council, was dropped from the presidency of the company, which he has held for some years, and from the list of directors. The Boston Post in its comments upon this fact, speaks of it as "another chapter" in the story of "political persecution" carried on by "the narrow-minded partisans of Maine," and it thinks that such a "spirit of intolerance" is not to be endured in a civilized community, and that "business men without regard to party, should stamp it out."

This indignation, to which the Post gives expression, is very litteness, and it appears to be sincere. It is perhaps worth while to see how far it is justified by the facts. Let us take the case of the Biddeford congregation, for example. It is made up presumably, of people who retain the old-fashioned notion that the purpose of an election is to determine the will of the people—not to give a pretext for thwarting it; and that it is on the whole more proper and just that men who have been elected to office should hold it rather than the men who have been defeated. Very likely, too, these Biddeford people have an idea that the Supreme Court is the highest tribunal, and that vituperative abuse of its Judges does not invalidate its decisions. At all events, they considered that a minister, whose interpretation of the eighth commandment was so at variance with their own views of honesty, could do them little good as a religious teacher. Would the Post have them retain him? The rule which applies to and explains the other cases is admirably simple. Reduced to its lowest terms, it is that a man who is dishonest in one set of relations is likely to be dishonest in another. There is not one sort of morality in politics and another in business. If a man is false and tricky in a public trust, there is ground to suppose that he may prove false and tricky in a private one. A man who was attempting to pick another man's pocket would not be likely to complain of social ostracism if he was detected in the act. A man who tries to steal another man's seat in the Legislature has no occasion to find fault if honest men shun him. Theft is theft, and the proper position for thieves is in confinement, not in places of private trust or public honor. These considerations we submit, in all deference, to the better judgment of the Post. Unless the magnitude of a crime is to be taken as an extenuating circumstance, the Fusionist conspirators to Maine are receiving what they deserve; and are reaping what they have sown. They have sown dishonor, and the harvest is distrust.

GOVERNMENT, NOT ANARCHY IN MAINE.

[From the Springfield Republican.]

It is equally certain that peace will prevail in the second stage on which the controversy in Maine has entered. Backed by the highest Court in the State, Governor Davis acted rightly in closing the State House against the invasion of a body which is not in fact or in law a legal Legislature. The Fusionists have their appeal to the people and they have nothing else. They can make their appeal effective or ridiculous as they prefer. If they think that sixteenth sessions and a side-show Legislature will help them at the polls next September, they have a right to the chances under existing laws. Popular government is to accept that it can afford to disregard the decisions playing at insanity. Scarcely any other government could last beyond voting week full, everybody knows that the men in the State Legislature and do nothing except make fools of themselves. That they are well aware. There is no law against it. If they proceed to overt acts, they ought to be checked as Governor Davis checked them in the attempt to enter the State House, just as King Log broke half cast in gold and no law infringed, the gates Fusionists and continue their agitation at pleasure. If they choose to appeal to Congress, that will be a matter for discussion and decision on constitutional precedents which are all against the Fusionists. Fully organized, fairly established, backed by the moral and material forces of the State, the legal government of Maine can await the issue with serenity.

There is not a word of truth in the statement telegraphed to Boston that the "moderate Republicans" including Governor Davis are expressing regret that the factions began legislature and kept out of the State House last Monday. On the contrary every sensible man commends that wise and proper action by which a probable collision was avoided. Joe Smith has place boasted that if cakes' fat into the State House his crew would have bloodshed before they would go out. Preventing them from going in was a very judicious measure as is recognized elsewhere by an anti-Republican a paper call the Springfield Republican.

Badger has been highly complimental by the refusal of the fusionists to consider it among the possible places for the setting up of their bogus "Legislature." Bangor is an unhealthy place for shams.

It is amusing to see the fusion organs proclaiming the cruel-bruised talk of Washington Gilbert on a demolition of the Supreme Court by a Republican. Gilbert has not been a Republican for years, but his organs have been contemporaries ever longer.

Among those who have rendered most valuable service in preserving the peace and upholding the laws at the State Capitol great credit is due to Sheriff William Gilbley, of Kennebec County and his corps of deputies who are have been indefatigable in their labors throughout the crisis.

If the fusion Senator Hitz does not mean to be regarded unfair that he should at once give the name of that "one of the leading men" of the Republican legislature who, as he says, is "ready for a compromise," and who declares that a "large element" of the Republican members is in favor of compromise. We can tell Mr. Hitz that any Republican who should openly favor any compromising with the conspirators who so nearly succeeded in revolutionizing the State, would at once and loudly be repudiated by his Republican constituents in any part of the State to "stay down and out" from the Legislature of Maine.
